This delightful and uncategorisable film moves seamlessly from sweet comedy to moving drama. Enabling JavaScript in your browser will allow you to experience all the features of our site. There was certainly no lack of interest in classical music at the Adelphi as the Twentieth Century dawned. A masked ball in the Hall of Mirrors by Nicolas Cochin. Ironically, it is to authority that the Wife appeals in her assertion of the superiority of experience, and we are treated to a sustained demonstration of reason applied to text.
